112 projects funded to date!

In this quarterly update, the Appeal Trust has allocated over $43 million to more than 112 projects. Back in March, the Trust funded its 100th project; the Linfield Cultural Recreational Sports Club to provide sports programmes to school children in eastern suburbs.

Essentially, the Trust aims to fund genuine community needs, small or large, and earthquake-related, that would not otherwise be addressed without help from the Appeal Trust.

A good example is the $2 million granted for sports recovery last month to hockey, rowing, bowls and cricket. Thousands of people in Canterbury play these sports, and without help from the Appeal Trust it was unlikely that these sports projects would receive funding in the foreseeable future.

The Trust receives many queries to fund community centres and meeting places. We acknowledge that in some suburbs there is a real shortage and we are working with the City Council to ensure that affected communities have adequate meeting and recreational facilities.

If your community group is seeking funding, we advise you to first talk to any regional groups or agencies relevant to your proposal. If you have a local project that may be common with others across the city or region, work together wherever possible to try and address multiple needs with one solution.

Next quarter, we're looking forward to sharing our first annual report.

Thank you!

It's humbling that people are still raising money for the people of Christchurch. Like the people behind the Entertainment Books, Landcare Research, Rainforest Retreat, Malaysia New Zealand Chamber of Commerce, One Tree Hill College, to name a few.
